

Little Lord Fauntleroy (illustrated)

Little Lord Fauntleroy by Frances Burnett is a childrens classic. The story is based on a young boy named Cedric who lives with his mother in a tiny cottage in New York after his father dies. Lucky for Cedric, a lawyer finds him and tells him that he is the heir to the title of Earl and a vast Estate in England. His grandfather the Earl of Dorincourt, has sent for him, and it is his grandfathers wish that Cedric come to the estate to learn to be an aristocrat with the new title, Lord Fauntleroy. However, Cedrics mother is not welcomed by the old Earl because he never approved of the marriage between her, an American, and his now deceased son. Ultimately Cedric chooses to go live with his grandfather at the estate. As the two begin to come together, a woman claims that her son is in fact the rightful heir, causing great trouble and confusion. Although Cedric sees his grandfather as a kind and generous man, it is obvious that the Earl is old and bitter yet Cedrics gentle nature and passion towards others intrigues the Earl, and eventually, the Earl becomes the man Cedric that had imagined him to be.
